An opportunity at your checkout counter

OPENING LETTER

Grocery stores sell food. Pharmacies sell medicine. Both make steady money on greeting cards. Your counter has the same traffic, and no cards yet.

Your customers already grab drinks, snacks, chargers and sunglasses at checkout. They buy what's in front of them. The New Tradition puts bright, funny greeting cards in that same spot, an easy last-minute impulse buy.

Grocery-store cards are generic and don't fit the parts and hardware crowd. Ours are about car and garage life: check engine lights, the missing 10mm socket, borrowed tools, finished DIY projects. Greeting cards made for the auto parts & hardware counter, designs your customers won't find anywhere else.

The customer who came in for wiper blades or a box of screws has a dad with a birthday on Sunday. Now he doesn't need a second stop.

The footprint is a few inches of counter space: twelve designs in a secured 12-pocket counter spinner, one design per pocket, about 8 cards per pocket and the extras kept as backstock. For merchandising, it is a new category with about 50% margin, placed where every customer pays, with a deep bench of seasonal designs to rotate in.

Six additional customer-appreciation designs give your store teams a personal way to thank regular customers and celebrate finished projects. We can print any custom greeting you like inside any card design, just ask.

Start with a 120-card pilot order (12 designs × 10), and we include the secured 12-pocket spinner free. The following pages show the artwork, the inside messages and the pilot terms.

Warm regards,

Brian Carey

A FOCUSED STARTING ASSORTMENT

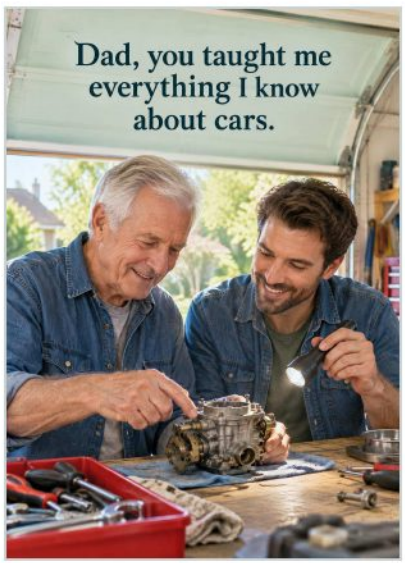

Twelve designs customers recognize at a glance. Birthdays, thank-you greetings, proud DIY moments and seasonal favorites.

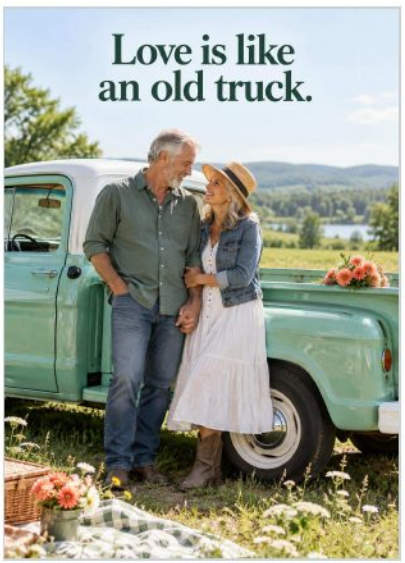

Start with a 120-card pilot order (12 designs × 10), and we include the secured 12-pocket spinner free. Staff load about 8 cards per pocket and keep the extras as backstock.

Run the pilot in selected stores, then review sales by design and feedback from your store teams. Reorder the best sellers and refresh the seasonal mix.

The twelve designs shown next are our recommended selection. We will finalize the launch mix with your buyer and bring in the right seasonal cards for your launch date.
