"I'm Schnitzel. They forgot me."

A poster was on the post.

Her name is Helga.

I am six inches tall. I saw him.

The big windows drove right past.

"We will find Helga."

And we will have a blast.

Yellowstone. The ground went up in steam.

We were small under all that steam.

A poster on the lodge.

Helga had been here. We were one stop behind.

Dust in the air. They just left.

Napa. The vines were taller than we were.

A poster on a barrel. The ink was still wet.

Closer.

Reno. Lights in the dark.

We listened at the gate.

Then I heard it. The rumble.

It was this close.

A long silver motorhome.

At the end of the row.

And on the step, Helga.

Crying. She thought Schnitzel was gone forever.

I barked. I am only six inches tall.

So Helga would look down.

Helga looked down.

Schnitzel ran.

Helga opened her arms.

He was home.

Helga laughed and cried at the same time.

"You found him," said Helga.

Six inches tall. That was tall enough.

The rumble started. This time Schnitzel was in it.

Pepper, Schnitzel, and Helga. The road was ready.
